ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a system and method of automatically selecting check templates for image-based fraud detection including the steps of presenting a check image from an account, matching the check image against a series of known check templates from the account, producing confidence scores corresponding to the degree of similarity of the check image compared to each check template and matching the confidence scores with a predetermined high similarity threshold and a predetermined low similarity threshold.